BUSINESS & MANAGEMENT TITLES, JAN - MARCH 2024

The Science of Business

Justin B. Craig, Bond University, Australia and Northwestern University, US and Ken Moores, Bond University, Australia

'Craig and Moores ambitiously explain the essential aspects of business. They build a framework of business as science, use this framework to explore the essential tasks facing business people, and demonstrate the framework's utility by using it to address some pressing business issues. Bravo!'

– Dean Shepherd, University of Notre Dame, US

Adopting a multidisciplinary approach, Justin Craig and Ken Moores reinforce the positioning of business as a science and remind the reader that those involved in the practice of business are, in fact, social scientists. Showcasing a novel science of business framework, the book is populated with economic, entrepreneurial, accounting, financial, marketing and management discipline perspectives.

The Value of Theorizing

How New Theory Matters in Research Work and University Governance Practice

Alexander Styhre, University of Gothenburg, Sweden

'Academic work has been fundamentally transformed in recent decades, where professional recognition has been equaled with measurable scientific impact. But what is impact, really? In his provocative new book, Alexander Styhre unpacks the concept of impact and how it may correspond with genuine scientific progress. In doing so, he questions the contemporary foundations for the valuation and governance of research. This will be essential reading for anyone interested in the future of academic work, moving beyond sterile and simplified notions of impact.'

Research Handbook on Inequalities and Work

Edited by Cynthia Forson, Lancaster University, Geraldine Healy, Mustafa B. Öztürk and Ahu Tatli, Queen Mary University of London, UK

'The workplace can reproduce income and social inequalities, leading to persistent disparities across individuals and societies. This volume enumerates the different ways in which inequalities are manifested through the labour market, occupations, careers and organizations. It also casts attention on the role of climate change in exacerbating inequalities towards vulnerable populations.'

– Eddy Ng, Queen's University, Canada

This multi-disciplinary international Research Handbook on Inequalities and Work, examining disparities within contemporary working life, comes at a critical juncture of global socio-historical change. As the world reels from the impact of economic insecurity, migration, wars, the pandemic, the Black Lives Matter and #MeToo movements, the trans liberation fight, the climate crisis and the rise of Artificial Intelligence, systemic inequalities and their impacts have been thrust into the limelight, alongside the ceaseless struggle for social justice.

Rethinking Events

A Critique and Reconfiguration

Vassilios Ziakas, Leisure Insights Consultancy, Leeds and Honorary Faculty, University of Liverpool, UK

'Vassilios Ziakas challenges practitioners and theorists to find new ideas and ways to make events more resilient and sustainable. He argues for holistic, cross-management thinking, and a major shift in emphasis from single, one-time and mega events to healthy portfolios of small events that contribute to placemaking within a chaotic, transdisciplinary frame. Such a profound re-think is timely and necessary.'

Handbook of Accounting and Public Governance

Exploring Hybridizations

Edited by Giuseppe Grossi, Kristianstad University, Nord University, Norway and Kozminski University, Poland and Jarmo Vakkuri, Tampere University, Finland and Norwegian School of Economics, Norway

'In the past decades, the number and types of hybrid organizations has increased strongly – and these organizations are here to stay! The hybridity of these organizations has had impact on all elements of public governance. Mixing efficiency driven modes with more attention for public value creation creates tensions for accountability, financial and other types of reporting, performance measurement and budgeting. This Handbook offers a welcome overview and discussion of these tensions, with examples from various countries, policy sectors, and government levels. It is a must read for scholars and students who are studying hybrid organizations.'

Religious-Spiritual Diversity in Organisations

Crafting the Religious Diversity Mosaic in Organisational Life

Edwina Pio, ONZM, Auckland University of Technology and Independent Academic, Robert Kilpatrick, ARKCON Ltd., Former Co-chair of Joint Learning Initiative and Peter Lineham, MNZM, Massey University, Auckland, Aotearoa New Zealand

'The pendulum on religious matters has swung away from common advice to avoid discussions about religion or politics at dinner. But while many today recognize that the world is, as one scholar put it, "ferociously religious", many are unsure how to take a next step. Religious-Spiritual Diversity in Organisations, by Edwina Pio, Robert Kilpatrick and Peter Lineham, delves deeply into the topic from the standpoint of business communities. How can companies and their employees best address the realities of religious diversity, even tensions, in today's complex and dynamic world?'

Cases on Born Globals

Erik S. Rasmussen, University of Southern Denmark (SDU), Denmark

'The book is timely and much needed. The attention around Born Global firms has grown in the last three decades, but what has been missing so far is a collection of cases capable of bridging theory and practice. Another key strength of the book lies in the variety of cases, across diverse countries and typologies of businesses, well-written by expert authors.'

Tourism, Hospitality, and Leisure

Edited by Joseph S. Chen, Indiana University Bloomington, US, Nina K. Prebensen, University of South-Eastern Norway, Norway and Muzaffer S. Uysal, University of Massachusetts Amherst, US

'Finally, a book about experience science for academics and practitioners. This is a book for students and researchers wishing to understand experience theory, its roots, current status and future research directions. The evidence-based case studies at the end illustrate how experiences in the THL industries are formed, guiding practitioners in how to design experiencescapes for value and well-being. This book made me happy.'

A Research Agenda for Trust

Interdisciplinary Perspectives

Edited by Roger C. Mayer, North Carolina State University, US and Barbara M. Mayer, Development Consultant, US

'This volume brings together a broad range of social science scholarship loosely centered around the influential Mayer, Davis and Schoorman (1995) model of trust. This new collection is particularly valuable for including discussions of cutting-edge topics, including artificial intelligence, computer sciences, autonomous technologies and the neuroscience underpinnings of trust. As trust in political, social, legal, administrative, and scientific authorities (or the lack of it) becomes a more pressing concern in the 21st century both scholars and policy makers will find this volume informative and valuable.'

Handbook of Research on Gender and Leadership

Second Edition

Edited by Susan R. Madsen, Utah State University, US

'This extraordinary collection of research and practices needs to be used as a manual for action. Years ago, Kofi Annan stated: "The future of the world depends on women." The current world of aggression and oppression is one consequence of denying women access to leadership. There is no more time to consider women's role as life-affirming leaders – we must enact and embody the clarity and wisdom contained in this new edition.'

Rethinking Gender Inequalities in Organizations

Penny Dick, Sheffield University Management School, UK

'This book offers a compellingly provocative rethinking of gender inequalities in organizations. It unpacks taken for granted ideas about the work and lives of women and men in all their diversity. Penny Dick urges us to think critically about the very notion of inequalities and interrogates the standards of what is valued in contemporary workplaces. It shows that what counts as work and who counts as a worker are not given, but instead are social and political constructs which devalue many contributions many women make.'

Concise Encyclopedia of Corporate Social Responsibility

Edited by Lee Matthews, Lara Bianchi, and Claire Ingram, University of Nottingham, UK

This Concise Encyclopedia is an interdisciplinary overview of the field of Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR). It not only incorporates well-established concepts proffered by highly influential voices, but also captures the perspectives of tomorrow.

The entries present some of the main topics gravitating around CSR and its theoretical evolution, while recognising how the framework has spread out into different academic fields. This Concise Encyclopedia helps to update CSR scholarship in line with developments within the broader discourse on the responsibilities of business, with new reflections on well-established concepts.

Research Handbook on Complex Project Organizing

Edited by Graham M. Winch, Alliance Manchester Business School, UK, Maude Brunet, HEC Montréal, Canada, Dongping Cao, Tongji University, China

'Modern projects, whether undertaken by public organizations for societal benefit or private firms for commercial advantage, pose a genuine challenge for their sponsors, who often discover belatedly that their technical challenges are quickly eclipsed by other layers of complexity involved in managing myriad stakeholders (team members, cooperating organizations, public advocacy groups, and so forth). The more we can identify – in advance – the combination of technical and behavioral challenges to be addressed and begin to formulate the best means to respond to these challenges, the greater the likelihood our projects will realize their often lofty goals. Professors Winch, Brunet, and Cao have created a singularly valuable book that comes at a welcome and opportune moment, as public and private sector money to be spent on projects continues to balloon. The work of three acknowledged, world-class thinkers on project management, Research Handbook on Complex Project Organizing is destined to be an immediate and significant addition to the literature and current managerial practice. Its arrival is both timely and of critical importance to our deeper understanding of project management challenges in the twenty-first century.'

How to Write Differently

A Quest for Meaningful Academic Writing

Edited by Monika Kostera, University of Warsaw, Poland, Södertörn University, Sweden and Université Paris-Saclay, LITEM, France

'Nanni Moretti, the Italian film director, once said: "those who speak badly, think badly and live badly". This masterly written book teaches us that this adage applies, and even more, to the written word. Academics have in their texts their most powerful weapon and sharpest tool. This book reminds us that we need to manage both with the deserved care and respect.'

Research Companion to Construction Economics

Edited by George Ofori, London South Bank University, UK

'Probably the most important book in construction economics, this book will teach readers how economics is applied in the construction industry. It describes construction's impact on enterprises and individuals, as well as the history and economy of ancient architecture. It reviews the expected industrial advancements in developed countries. Traditional development models, tensions between justice, fairness, and economic efficiency are also examined in this book. This book will be very useful to the construction industry.'
