Perceived Benefits versus Unintended Consequences

2nd edition

Imad A. Moosa, Ton Duc Thang University, Vietnam

Acclaim for the first edition: 'I know of no other work on the subject that collates and curates such a vast armamentarium of depressing, condemning data. Yes, to read this book is to be presented with example after astonishing example of situations that make the reader question, ultimately, how knowledge—which is, after all, what is at stake—manages to advance in the current academic environment.'

A Research Agenda for Financial Resources within the Household

Edited by Fran Bennett, University of Oxford, UK, Silvia Avram, University of Essex, UK and Siobhan Austen, Curtin University, Australia

'How resources are distributed within households is notoriously difficult to analyse. The 15 chapters of this book offer a remarkable review of the conceptual and methodological challenges faced and the advances in research on intra-household management and allocation of resources, the importance of the issues raised and their implications for the assessment of individual economic well-being, autonomy and living conditions, and for public policies. This is essential reading.'

ESG Rating Agencies and Financial Regulation

A Signalling Theory Approach

Daniel Cash, Aston University, UK

'Credit rating agencies have taken criticism for misrepresenting risk, especially in relation to the 2008 global financial crisis. ESG ratings agencies have also occasionally underdelivered on their aim of providing useful information to investors. With issues such as climate change becoming front and center, it is refreshing to see this book emerge from Daniel Cash, one of the more thoughtful writers working on the connection between ESG and rating agencies.'

Handbook of Accounting and Public Governance

Exploring Hybridizations

Edited by Giuseppe Grossi, Kristianstad University, Nord University, Norway and Kozminski University, Poland and Jarmo Vakkuri, Tampere University, Finland and Norwegian School of Economics, Norway

'In the past decades, the number and types of hybrid organizations has increased strongly – and these organizations are here to stay! The hybridity of these organizations has had impact on all elements of public governance. Mixing efficiency driven modes with more attention for public value creation creates tensions for accountability, financial and other types of reporting, performance measurement and budgeting. This Handbook offers a welcome overview and discussion of these tensions, with examples from various countries, policy sectors, and government levels. It is a must read for scholars and students who are studying hybrid organizations.'

Pandemic Recovery?

Reframing and Rescaling Societal Challenges

Edited by Lauren Andres, The Bartlett School of Planning, University College London, John R. Bryson, University of Birmingham, UK, Aksel Ersoy, Delft University of Technology, the Netherlands and Louise Reardon, University of Birmingham, UK

'A comprehensive survey of "recovery society" highlighting how Covid-19 amplified existing inequalities, as well as generating myriad improvisations and forms of resilience. Perhaps most importantly, it underlines how political efforts too often remain premised on the pre-pandemic status quo even as shock events – including those associated with catastrophic climate change – continue to challenge communities across the world.'

Migration, Mobility and the Creative Class

Ellen Hughes, University of the West of England Bristol, Don J. Webber, The University of Sheffield and Glenn Parry, University of Surrey, Guildford, UK

Migration, Mobility and the Creative Class challenges contemporary conceptions of the mobility of the creative worker. Exploring the differences between a range of historical, political, and social contexts, this forward-thinking book contests the validity and logic of policymakers' strategies to attract the creative class, and emphasises the need for a reassessment of the strategies employed for local and regional development.

Buddha, Wisdom and Economics

A Contribution to the Art of Happiness

S. Niggol Seo, Lamajel Ling, Chiang Mai, Thailand

'Buddha, Wisdom and Economics: A Contribution to the Art of Happiness by S. Niggol Seo is a complicated and thoughtful treatise of two facets of the author's life. The first has been spent reading and absorbing the thoughts of the three Buddhas. The second has been a long professional education understanding economics and applying that understanding specifically to environmental economics. The aim of the book is to present a deeper understanding of Buddhism to economists and an introduction of economics to Buddhists.'
