Research Handbook on Line Managers

Edited by Keith Townsend, Griffith University, Australia, Anna Bos-Nehles, University of Twente, the Netherlands and Kaifeng Jiang, The Ohio State University, US

This timely Research Handbook brings together 24 chapters with a wide range of different theoretical perspectives, empirical research, and innovative thought provoking ideas relating to an area of organisation and management that has been neglected for many decades – line managers.

With a resurgence of interest in the topic in recent decades, this Research Handbook argues that line managers are a critical element of both employee experiences and organisational performance and worthy of close attention. Split into three sections, chapters present various ways in which line managers can implement HRM practices in the organisation, considering the implementation of a variety of HRM policies and practices (content), a variety of implementation processes (process), and a variety of line management actors. It also develops future directions for research on line managers, such as the future of work, digitalisation, robotisation and AI and the gig economy.

New Horizons in Management series

Franz Kafka and the Truths of Leadership

Edited by Leah Tomkins, Independent Scholar, University of the West of England, and formerly University of Oxford, UK

'Full of rich original work, this book has intellectual verve, an admirable sprightly conciseness, and an elegant, unshowy erudition. Tomkins writes so well about issues that have engaged me in the past: Perhaps the great saying of André Gorz applies, when he speaks of the "chaud bonheur" of realizing that someone else "has suffered even more than oneself for the same great cause" – oh, let's say, "suffered comparably". Kudos!'

– Stanley Corngold, Emeritus Professor of German and Comparative Literature, Princeton University, US

In this innovative addition to the New Horizons in Leadership Studies series, Leah Tomkins explores Franz Kafka's expertise in the exercise of power, emphasising his own work as a leader. Through extensive primary research and original translation, she combines literary and philosophical critique with analysis of contemporary figures to craft a manifesto for leadership relations.

How to Develop a Sustainable Business School

Véronique Ambrosini, Gavin Jack, Monash University, Australia and Lisa Thomas, Kedge Business School, France

'While business schools were heralded as the success story of 21st Century higher education, this book argues that a paradigm shift in governance is now required. Going beyond well-rehearsed criticisms of business schools and programmatic calls for incremental change, Ambrosini and colleagues argue that business school leaders must change the raison d'être of their organisations to focus on sustainability. The authors' skilful marshalling of evidence and insight convinces of the need for transformation. Their deep appreciation of the institutional context surfaces many barriers to progress. For those who are brave enough to try to address these challenges, this book will provide an authoritative source of inspiration.'

Edited by Eleri Rosier, Cardiff University, UK, Adam Lindgreen, Copenhagen Business School, Denmark and University of Pretoria, South Africa, Antonia Erz, Copenhagen Business School, Denmark, Ben Marder, University of Edinburgh Business School, UK and Sylvia von Wallpach, Copenhagen Business School, Denmark

'A timely volume turning our gaze to character building rather than technical skills. Any technical skill has an expiry date while personal values persist. This book powerfully attests to the importance of developing responsible minds in tackling boundaryless problems and creating sustainable futures. The volume firmly places the Nordic Nine on the global map of transformative qualities to develop in the future generations of business leaders, while offering a range of practical examples of their implementation.'

Smart Talent Management

Managing People as Knowledge Assets 2nd edition

Edited by Vlad Vaiman, California Lutheran University, Charles Vance, Loyola Marymount University and Ling Ju, 917 Fine Arts Corporation, US

'Smart Talent Management, a term coined by the editors (Vaiman and Vance) in the previous edition of this highly informative and instructive book, is "simply the combination of talent management and knowledge management." In this second edition, the editors advance our understanding of smart talent management rather substantially. They do this through guidance they have provided to and shared with their excellent cadre of chapter contributors. [T]hey have provided a broader path forward for future researchers in the areas of talent management and knowledge management.'

Authoritarian Capitalism in the Age of Globalization

2nd edition

Peter Bloom, University of Essex, UK

'This insightful book addresses a burning question: the relationship between capitalism and democracy in our crisis-ridden world. Bloom elegantly shows that the spread of capitalism worldwide has driven political systems towards increasingly authoritarian forms – and what we can do to reverse course, and build more tolerant and democratic societies. An essential read for troubled times.'

Maintaining a Sustainable Work–Life Balance

An Interdisciplinary Path to a Better Future

Edited by Peter Kruijen, Radboud University, Stéfanie André, Radboud University and Beatrice Van der Heijden, Radboud University, the Netherlands, the Open University of the Netherlands, the Netherlands and Kingston University, UK

'A community of scholars, working together virtually amidst the Covid pandemic, surveys the present and future of work–life balance from multiple disciplinary and stakeholder (workers, spouses and families, employers, communities, nations) perspectives. Fresh theorizing and sound research reveal how gig work, digitalization, shifting gender roles, and post-pandemic sensibilities are transforming how we work and live across career stages and the life span. The result is a must-read for work–life researchers, policy makers, and practitioners, a valuable resource for organizational and community scholars, and an inspiration and example for those who do (or aspire to do) relevant research.'

Advancing the Future of Management Education Research

Stuart Middleton, The University of Queensland, Australia

'Stuart Middleton's book provides a step-by-step strategy process for advancing Management Education. The book provides a masterful overview of the past approaches to management education (i.e., rational school, critical school, and postliberal school) as groundwork to ask instructors a series of self-reflective questions about how these approaches resonate with their own values and in today's world. This introspection provides a foundation for each instructor to further reflect on what the next approach of management education must entail. The result is an ongoing strategic discussion about how management education can stay relevant in a changing world. I have yet to see a book that accomplishes these objectives in one read. Well done, Stuart! This book is our pathway forward.'

Work, Employment and Flexibility

Innovation, Technology and the Changing World of Work

Edited by Peter Holland, Swinburne University of Technology, Australia, Chris Brewster, University of Reading, UK and Nadia K. Kougianou, Nottingham Trent University, UK

This insightful book examines the evolving landscape of work in the context of rapidly developing information and communication technology and Artificial Intelligence. It argues that while in the twentieth century there was a standardisation of work style, the twenty-first century is seeing the creation of ever more flexible forms of work, epitomised by the rise of the gig economy.

How to Become an Effective Journal Editor in Business and Management

A Guide to Developing Authors

Kathy Lund Dean, Gustavus Adolphus College, US

'Editors have an increasingly influential and pivotal role in knowledge production in this era of high-stakes peer review and the need for high-impact scholarship. However, few editors receive systematic training in their job's tactical, operational, and strategic roles. Enter How to be an Effective Journal Editor in Business and Management! I highly recommend this book and the practical and philosophical approach Dr. Lund Dean offers to anyone seeking to improve their editorial processes or move into an editorial team role.'

How to Use Digital Learning with Confidence and Creativity

A Practical Introduction

Edited by Gearóid Ó Súilleabháin, Donna Lanclos and Tom Farrelly, Munster Technological University, Ireland

'This book brings together an impressive collection of the best thinkers in global educational technology to provide a timely and much-needed analysis. The book establishes a conversation between technology, theory and praxis, and thus avoids the more hyperbolic utopias or dystopias regarding technology, instead focusing on thoughtful and useful implementation and considerations. An invaluable contribution for anyone interested in the intersection of education and technology.'
